Dear fellow Behavior Analyst,

Have you heard about the Interview Informed Synthesized Contingency Analysis (IISCA) approach to the assessment and treatment of challenging behaviors, yet still have questions? This C.E. event provides you access to an in-depth Question and Answer session with Dr. Greg Hanley. Here are just some of the topics covered in Session 20 of The Behavioral Observations Podcast:

1. A broad overview of teaching the Toleration Response
2. Contending with stereotypic behavior
3. How to manage situations when individuals emit the FCR outside of teaching sessions
4. How to consistently signal extinction for “unreasonable” mands
5. Why novel mands are used rather than mands for specific reinforcers
6. How to start off compliance training in an errorless manner

There are 1.5 Type 2 Continuing Education credits earned for participating in this event. To get the most out of this event, it is highly recommended that participants listen to Sessions 1 and 7 before listening to Session 20 of The Behavioral Observations Podcast.

Objectives of this training:

1. The learner will be able to state the rationale for using novel mands during functional communication training.
2. The learner will be able to state the procedure for teaching toleration responses.
3. The learner will be able to state how to respond to functional communication responses that occur outside of training sessions.
4. The learner will be able to state the types of responses to start compliance training with.
5. The learner will be able to state at least one potential problem associated with using visual schedules.
